We have lived in Leona Valley for going on twelve years. We enjoy the peace I quiet and beauty of our rural setting. But it also comes at a price. We still work hard to keep up our land, our property, our homes, and teach our children to do the same. We look hard financially to cover the cost of water, propane and electricity to get to town and educate our children — where they need to go, at various ages and stages of development. Many, many people have animals that they love for, school. We are extremely resistant to the idea of having power lines, etc. Destroying not only the God of our Valley, but possibly placing a health threat. I, a modern American, can't believe.
