

The existing view to the southwest toward the proposed El Casco Substation site, from the new residential development just east of the substation site and immediately north of San Timoteo Canyon Road. This viewpoint captures the complex forms and lines of the existing transmission lines that are prominent built features in an otherwise natural appearing landscape that is dominated by the rolling to angular hills and ridges south of San Timoteo Canyon Road.